Introduction

History

In 1992, the first class of Bachelor's Degree in Economics specialized in Investment Economics was publically called for enrollment with the aim of producing graduates who could work for both public investment management units and enterprises. In 1999, the Department started to offer the postgraduates' degree in Investment, including Master and PhD programs. From April 2004, the Department got the approval from the University to open a center for training and consultancy in investment. The center has undertaken a significant number of consulting projects and carried out a certain number of training courses for project officers from both public and private sectors. Witnessing the continuous development of the Department and the Center in terms of training and consulting scales, the University decided to establish the Faculty of Investment in 2008 to broaden the excellent impact of the teaching staffs at a higher level.
